

HEARST SAYS PARTY STANDING FOR EQUAL JUSTICE WILL WIN

ANSWERS CAMPAIGN QUESTIONS

Publisher Says La Guardia and Hylan Are Logical Candidates for Governor.

By Universal Service.
NEW YORK, July 24.—The Brooklyn Eagle printed today four questions it had submitted to William Randolph Hearst regarding the coming State campaign, together with Mr. Hearst's answers.

The Query and the Answer.

1. Do you consider that Mayor Hylan's statement of Thursday eliminates him from consideration as a candidate for governor?
2. Are you willing to consider his request that you organize sentiment in the State in behalf of the policies that you advocate?
3. Would you become a candidate for the nomination of governor if urged to do so by a considerable element of voters?
4. What will be the most important issue of the campaign?

Mr. Hearst's answers:
1. I shall never consider that anything eliminates Mayor Hylan as a candidate for governor. He is the logical candidate on the Democratic side just as Major La Guardia is the logical candidate on the Republican side.

Nothing should eliminate or be allowed to eliminate these able and loyal public servants from every consideration and every recognition on the part of the public and on the part of their respective parties.

This is emphatically a progressive year. The people have been plundered by profiteers. The public service corporations have filled the public coffers with their private employees.

They have prompted, appropriated, the people's government and perverted it to their private purposes and profits.

To continue this perversion of popular government would be to end democracy and to establish an autocracy of wealth and privilege. Naturally the citizenship of the nation is rebelling against reaction of this character.

Of two things will surely happen:
Either the Republican organization will fall into the hands of Progressives, as it has done in every primary in every State that has held this year.

Or the Democratic party will faithfully represent the sentiment of the citizenship, as it should do and as it was created to do.

Whichever party is the Progressive party, whichever party represents democratic ideals, whichever party stands for equal rights, equal opportunity, and equal justice should win, and will win.

Service Is Platform.

2. I am willing to do whatever I can do that is of most service in this crusade, for I am enlisted heart and soul in the cause of genuine democracy—the rule of the people by the people, for the people, for the people.

It is upon these principles that we have grown to greatness. It is only by adhering to these principles that we can maintain our leadership in world thought, in world progress, and in world power.

We of progressive sentiment, of popular sympathy, do not ask any special preference of one class over another—we do not require any favoritism for one element, any injury or injustice for another.

We merely demand equal rights, equal opportunity, and equal and exact justice.

That is not democracy. It is democracy—the democracy of Jefferson.

It is not too much to ask and it is not too much to get.

We are going to get it in this election. If we are not defeated by the nomination of rabid reactionaries, or deceived by the nomination of pretended Progressives, who profess loyalty to the public while they secretly serve the public plunderers.

The best service I can render, I think, to the cause of genuine democracy is to try to secure the nomination of faithful public servants, not merely for the governorship alone, but for the senate, for the assembly, and for other public offices throughout the State, so that a progressive administration may work throughout in harmony and sincerity for the public benefit.

3. I have continually said that I think I can do my best service as a journalist, and I think I can make that service most effective if it is not unfettered by any thought or suspicion of personal interest in politics.

I have been in journalism for forty years, and for all those forty years I have fought for the principles and the policies which are now approaching fruition and general recognition.

My object is not to occupy an office, but to see that those principles prevail, to see men nominated for office who sympathize with those principles and whose records prove that they sympathize with them.

I put no value upon mere lip services. We can depend only upon those who have shown their faith by their works.

Outlines Issues.
That is the reason I cling to Hylan and La Guardia and men of that character. And I will not discuss any other candidate as long as there is a possibility of nominating these men in their respective parties.

4. The important issue of the campaign is to put the Government in the hands of honest representatives of the citizens and take it out of the hands of the political agents of the public service corporations.

The chief issue of the campaign is to conduct the government for public benefit and not for private profit.

The chief issue of the campaign is to re-establish the government upon the firm foundation of equal rights, equal opportunity and equal justice on which it was built by the fathers.

We who desire this restoration of original rights and liberties are not radicals. We are the only true conservatives.

We wish to conserve the fundamental principles of Americanism. We wish to preserve the essentials of democracy.

We wish to maintain inviolate our republican institutions.

There is nothing radical in liberty, equality and common honesty in government.

There might have been in 1774. But there is not now, after 140 years of successful government operation under those primary principles.

LIE CASE WILL NOT BE QUASHED IN MT. RAINIER

Justice Joyce to Conduct Hearing Despite Confession of Mrs. Brooks.

Judge Robert E. Joyce, of Mt. Rainier, will continue the investigation into the Mt. Rainier acid-throwing mystery, despite the confession of Mrs. Nace Brooks that her story of five brutal attacks upon her were lies of her own making.

Judge Joyce will interview Mrs. Brooks some time next week. He will have her relate again the confession she made last Saturday night.

Hearing August 11.

The hearing on the charges of assault with intent to kill Mrs. Brooks as preferred against three Baltimore persons will be held on August 11 as arranged, Judge Joyce said today.

"I cannot end this case without holding a hearing and releasing these Baltimore people from bond," Judge Joyce said, "and I am anxious to go a little further into the case before bringing it to a close."

Those who are held under bond are: Mrs. Carrie Cavey, wife of Bradley Cavey, the man who instigated the investigation of the alleged acid throwing on Mrs. Brooks. She was released on $2,000 bond.

Miss Rosie Bradio, sister of Mrs. Cavey, who answers the description of the woman Mrs. Brooks charged threw lye into her eyes, blinding her, was released on $1,000 bond.

Archie Walters, of Baltimore, who is alleged to have visited Mr. Rainier, and plagued Mrs. Brooks, declaring he came as a representative of one of the "nobles" in the world, and sought a ring belonging to Mrs. Cavey, which he declared Mrs. Brooks was wearing, was released on $1,000 bond.

To Summon Witnesses.
Bradley Cavey, with whom Mrs. Brooks confessed she carried on a clandestine friendship for the past four years, was released from jail last Saturday night.

About a dozen witnesses will be summoned to the hearing on August 11. It is expected this hearing will end the investigation, unless the authorities are able to pick a flaw in Mrs. Brooks' confession.

Nance Brooks, husband of Mr. Brooks, came from an old Washington family, who were among the first settlers in Brookland, D. C. Mrs. Brooks was married and lived in Riverdale.

The Brooks have a boy seven years old, an adopted son.

"I have brought disgrace upon myself and husband," said Mrs. Brooks yesterday. "I have injured innocent persons, and no one will believe I was not wicked."

"I have no one to blame but myself, and I must pay."

Nance Brooks, the husband, declared he will stick by his wife, right or wrong.

every public officer is a trustee. But the Germans contend that he was a trustee for them, and as such trustee he had to be certain that all property formerly held by them in this country, and sold by them, brought its full value.

"Where will this lead to? It will inevitably mean that the Germans, with the Chemical Foundation as a precedent, will insist that the United States Government must return to the 'trusteeship' the wireless plants and all the patents on war materials—the great Hamburg-American and German Lloyd terminals at New York city which were sold by the Alien Property Custodian, to the President during the war for about $7,000,000, and which the Germans can probably show to have been worth much more than that."

After Patents Money.
"And then the Germans propose to collect on all former German patents used by American citizens, and even by the American Government during the war, for the very purpose of putting an end to the war which the Germans started."

Underwood charged that a large number of the so-called German corporations operating in this country before the entry of the United States into the world war and from which considerable property was eventually taken and sold by the Alien Property Custodian as a war measure were "mere spy centers" filled with agents of the German government who were charged with the duty of making reports on industrial, commercial and other conditions in this country.

He described how Michael Palmer, when Alien Property Custodian, was authorized by Congress to sell these former German properties and "hit the enemy where it would hurt by loosening the stranglehold which Germany had secured upon American industry and commerce." The former German holdings disposed of by Palmer were those of the "Junker class in Germany" upon which much of the blame of the world war has been placed.

Would Be Repudiated.
"If the Government should now undertake to sell these sales," Underwood said, "or to account to the former German owners for anything else than the proceeds of the sales, it would be a deliberate repudiation of a policy of the Government during the war which had much to do with breaking the morale of the German people behind the lines and, consequently, with finally winning the war."

"My own firm conviction is that the policy was right and we ought to stand by it. The sale of the properties in question by the Alien Property Custodian was justified by all circumstances existing at the time. Our allies did practically the same thing. In Great Britain all the German properties were liquidated. They were not even sold as going business but were dismantled and practically destroyed. Similar action was taken in France."

Laddie Boy's Father Sends Son Birthday Cake to White House

President's Canine Companion Will Have Big Spread on Lawn Wednesday.

"Never saw things so dog-gone glum around here since I arrived," mused Laddie Boy as he jumped up from his fifteenth nap today. "Mr. Harding and George Christian all worried over the strikes—as if they mean anything—newspaper boys lost all their pep—tourists hot and grouchy—Doc Smithers and the telegraphers ditto. 'Sa tough life!'"

So he prepared to do his double turn preparatory to a sixteenth snooze when all of a sudden into the White House executive offices staggered two messengers with a package pretty nearly as big as a soldier's bonus petition, and with the unmistakable and wonderful aroma of dog biscuits. Can't fool Laddie Boy on those.

Came from Ohio.

"Here's something for you, old timer," announced an attaché after reading the card affixed. "But you can't open it till Wednesday. Why, sure, that's my birthday anniversary," barked the First Airedale of the Land excitedly. And so it is, as Laddie Boy's father, champion "Tintin Tip Top," of Toledo, cordially bidding guests to "partake of the mammoth champion birthday cake. R. S. V. P."

The letter from Tintin Tip Top—he must have written it, because his name's signed to it—runs as follows: "Laddie Boy."

Washington, D. C.
"My dear Son:

"It has been almost a year and a half since you went to live in Washington among the great people of the world and we who stayed at home miss you."

"Just to remind you of us and to show you that our affection for you still runs deep and strong we are sending you a Champion cake for your birthday, also some most delicious treats to send to your particular friends."

"It is hard to realize what a famous family member we have in you, Laddie Boy. If we did not see your pictures which appear so often in our newspapers and magazines it would be hard for us to realize that you have grown to doghood and are no longer the roistering young blade that we bid good-by to long ago."

"We too have changed, so I am sending you some snapshots of us. There is one of your mother, one of your sister, Lily, one of Bob, your brother, who is living in New York, one of Dick, your baby brother whom you have never seen, and one of myself. I hope they will give you as much pleasure as your pictures give us."

"It is fine to have a son of whom one may be proud and we are rightfully proud of you; proud of the high estate to which you have risen and more than proud of your unaffected, simple dignity. Your behavior speaks volumes for you and amply rewards us for the many months we gave to your youthful training; it robs me of every opportunity to indulge in fatherly advice."

"Enjoy your birthday, son, and your cake. Think of us now and then with kindly remembrances when the cares of your high responsibility hang heavy on your mind and take comfort from the love and good wishes we extend to you."

"Lovingly, your father.
"CHAMPION TINTIN TIP TOP."
(The biscuits, by computation, number 587.)

Takes Another Nap.
With them come all the good wishes of Caswell Kennels, where Laddie Boy was whelped. "I don't suppose Mr. Harding or George Christian or Doc Smithers will want any of these dainties, but my birthday party will certainly live things up a bit, and maybe some of my friends will have suggestions to end the strikes—though I can't see that they mean anything."

And he did the double turn and went into Sleep No. 16.

SHOP STRIKERS SETTLING DOWN BY 500 GIVES IN, FOR LONG TIE-UP

Union Here Declares Walkout 100 Per Cent Effective and Fight to Finish.

"If the Washington Terminal Company not only has all the men it needs in its power plants, but has developed a reserve force, why does it continue to advertise daily for shop workers, stationary engineers, firemen and electricians?"

This was the question asked today by Charles A. H. Frazier, business agent for the striking members of Washington shop crafts locals, as an answer to Sunday's statements by terminal officials that employment conditions in the power plant were normal.

Strikers Show Apathy.
A sort of siege apathy seemed this morning to have settled over the more than 2,000 strikers and their heads. They have announced their determination to stay out until word comes from Chicago to resume, and claim the defection is 100 per cent intact, but the "pep" has markedly subsided. The prospect of a strike lasting several months instead of weeks, as was at first confidently predicted, has given the union men food for thought.

At a public strike meeting yesterday in the Avenue Grand Theater, P. J. Conlon, vice president of the International Association of Machinists, declared the present move by rail employees was one planned since April, 1921, when the national agreement with the road executives was abrogated.

"We knew better than to call a strike on any individual system," he said, "because that would have enabled all the other roads to send in money, men and supplies to fight us, and when they had whipped us on one system, it would have been only a short time until we would have been whipped on another. Our only hope was a strike on a national scale."

Blames Labor Board.
Conlon blamed the Railroad Labor Board for not revealing the full import of a general strike. The public was deceived into thinking there would be no walkout, he said.

"Then when we did actually go out," he complained, "an effort was made to put us in the light of opposing the Government and interfering with the transportation of the mails. There was talk of mobilizing a fleet of trucks, and when we responded by bringing on the trucks and we will help put them in condition and get the mail issue out of the affair' talk of this nature ceased."

The strikers have "hardly started yet," Conlon concluded amid cheers. Other speakers were Arthur Holder, a member of the Federal Board for Vocational Education; John Baer, former Congressman from North Dakota, and H. L. Brunson, labor official.

IRISH REBELS IN FLIGHT ON LINE 70 MILES LONG

Free Staters Try to Cut Off de Valera's Men in Cork Retreat.

By International News Service.
DUBLIN, July 24.—Free State troops have captured Ballinlough and Ballyhumla, it was announced today.

The Free Staters now control a seventy-mile front between Waterford and Limerick.

They are trying to cut off the rebel retreat toward Cork.

All three agencies of modern warfare are now employed in the Irish hostilities—infantry, airplanes and naval craft. A Free State "mosquito fleet" armed with three pounders is preparing to patrol the coast.

Several efforts to effect a truce have been unavailing. The archbishop of Tuam, in his sermon Sunday, made a powerful appeal to all Irishmen to "cease killing fellow Irishmen."

The main body of the rebels continued the flight southward with the regulars pressing in hot pursuit. It is expected that the rebels will make their final stand either in the Cork or Galtee mountains.

The entrances to the city of Cork have been barricaded and long rows of entrenchments flank all the highways in the southern extremity of Cork county.

Two Killed In Raid.

LONDON, July 24.—Two men were killed and one was wounded by raiders while looting shops and residences at Saxon and Knocknaron today, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Dublin this afternoon.

shooting the negro fled to the woods where he remained until he surrendered. He said he had not eaten anything since the murder.

Receiving information that the Prince William county men were bent on bringing him to a swift end if they caught him, he sent word to the commonwealth's attorney that he would give himself up if he were assured protection. This assurance was given and Harris was met by Lion and a deputy sheriff who arrested him and escorted him to the Alexandria jail.

It is alleged that Harris expressed regret that he had not slain his father and wife before surrendering. It was the negro's wife who notified the authorities of the slaying.
